Mr. Kissinger told his top aides that he hoped to make a major effort in the next few days to see whether possibilities really existed for an early agreement. He told the sides, and the Israelis tonight, that he should know by Tuesday, or perhaps Wednesday, whether an agreement was possible. If it is, he plans to try to work it out by the end of next week. The action appeared to have halted all of the peace-keeping machinery set up by the Paris accords on ending the war and restoring peace in Vietnam which were signed in January, 1973. The South Vietnamese govern-

In the 15 months that the commission has been operating, it has failed to implement most of the major provisions of the agreement, including delineation of zones of control meeting of opposing battlefield commanders at points of hostility and removal of mines and booby traps through-

The other peace-keeping commission, the Four-Nation International Commission of Control and Supervision, which operates on the principle of unanimity, has been paralyzed by an ideological split. The members are Indonesia and Iran and the Communist-bloc nations of Hungary and Poland.

Noisy Rallies

A flurry of noisy rallies continued in major cities today. Rome was littered by tons of leaflets-most of them urging that the law be retained.

Pope Paul VI, breaking his silence on the referendum, told Italian bishops last night that he supports the view that marriages cannot be dissolved.

Italian bishops have called the divorce law "permissive" and urg-ed their flocks to do away with the statute that permits divorce after a separation of five years. So far, 66,641 Italian couples have obtained divorces. .

The Church-backed Christian Democratic party, Italy's largest political organization, and the neo-Fascist Social Movement also campaigned for the abrogation of

Majority in Poll Feels Nixon Will Be Shown Guilty NEW YORK, May 10 (AP),-

For the first time, a majority of Americans believes that President Nixon will be found to have violated the law, according to a Harris poll released yesterday. But the poll taken in April found a shift against Mr. Nixon's resignation and a slight decline in the number who felt he should be impeached.

The count was 51 percent who to have violated the law, 30 percent who believed he will not, and 19 percent who were not sure. In October, the figures were 39 percent. 36 percent and 25 percent, and in March they were 49 percent, 34 percent and 17 percent. The poll of 1,503 adults also showed that only 40 percent felt

Mr. Nizon should resign, while 49 percent felt he should not, and 11 percent were not sure. In March the count was 44 percent, 47 percent and 9 percent. Those interviewed divided even-

Labor government plans drastic cuts in defense spending, including a likely military pullout from Southeast Asia and troop and naval cutbacks in Europe, a high official said today.

Government sources said the cuts will be announced in an official white paper, probably in June. They said the aim is to plash defense spending from its present level of about £3.2 billion ($7,68 billion) to around £2.75 billion annually.

In Western Europe, a high official said, the government is taking a long, hard look at Britain's NATO forces. These total about 55,000 Rhine Army troops stationed in West Germany, an infantry brigade in West Berlin, air force squadrons and naval units in the North Sea and Mediterranean and airborne troops and planes ready to intervene in case of a Communist attack against Norway.

An official said Britain is the only NATO country in Europe making such a far-flung contribution to allied defense.

A detailed and sober analysis of Chancellor Willy Brandt's departure by Pravda appeared calculated both to reassure Soviet readers that detente should not be affected by the sudden turn of events in West Germany and to encourage the chancellor's successor to maintain the Ostpolitik course set out by Mr. Brandt.

At the same time, the Communist party paper, in offering the first extensive public explanation here of Mr. Brandt's sudden resignation, avoided any mention of the spy scandal that prompted the chancellor to leave office.

Instead, Prayda echoed some earlier assertions made by Soviet officials here by maintaining that internal difficulties accentuated by "unbridled propaganda campaigns, unceasing intrigues by reactionary forces and at times a direct hounding of Brandt and the cabinet he headed played a definite part in what has taken

The report, to be considered by the House Government Operations Committee Tuesday, said the $17.1 million included $7.5 million in personnel costs, $5.6 million for communications, $2.2 million for administrative support and $1.7 million for protection.

It still includes the findings, previously disclosed, that some of the spending was for items "far in excess of what was required to meet security requests' and that some items were paid for by the government after they had already been procured by Mr. Niron's aldes.

... Controls Urged

The draft report recommends tightening controls over spending by the Secret Service for protection of presidents. It also recommends that 'appropriate government agencies should seek restitution or take other appropriate action with respect to any improper expendi-tures of federal funds."

Copies of the final draft were sent to committee members yes-terday and were numbered to discourage leaks, but the Associated Press was permitted to take notes from one copy.

The draft report also recom-mends that in the future permanent security be established at only one of a president's private homes, to be selected by him.

The report was said to have received the broad support of committee Republicans at a caucus yesterday morning because of a general softening of some of its language and the addition of more information on security costs at past presidents' homes.

Several Republicans reached after the caucus said that their approval was not a turning away from Mr. Nixon but simply a basic approval of the report. Rep. John Buchanan, R-Ala, was the chief opponent of the report as originally approved by a subcommittee headed by Rep. Jack Brooks, D-Texas. Mr. Buchanan said he probably would vote for the report. Rep. Buchanan said, however, that he probably would submit a minority report including more emphasis on spending on past presidents' homes.

The report concluded that Congress had posed few restraints on spending for protection of presi-dents but that evidence showed Secret Service and other agencies have abused the discretion given

"They have permitted public funds to be used to procure nonsecurity items," it said. "They have permitted nongovernment personnel to commit federal government funds. They have abandoned fiscal responsibility and they have exercised a casual attitude on expending funds."

The draft report did not estimate how much of the $17 million expended enhanced the value of Mr. Nixon's homes at San Clemente, Calif., and Key Biscayne.

The House-Senate Internal Revenue Taxation Committee estimated that figure at $92,298 and concluded that the President should pay taxes on that amount as, in effect, job benefit income.

Nixon Spurns Mitterrand-Giscard Debate On TV Avoids New Ground

By Jonathan C. Randal

PARIS, May 10 (WP).-Valery Giscard d'Estaing and François Mitterrand tonight staged France's first live television debate between presidential candidates, but what had been billed as the turning point of the campaign proved something of a letdown. Perhaps oversold as the Gallic equivalent of the decisive 1960 television debates between Richard Nixon and John Kennedy, the 100-minute encounter repeated rguments which both candidates have developed throughout the month-long campaign. But even before the debate finished, a poll conducted by a semi-private French radio station indicated that 10 percent of the 400 persons questioned had changed their voting preference as a result. There was no indication in the poll on how many of those who they had changed their minds would vote for Mr. Mitterrand or his rival

If confirmed by more in-depth polls, such a swing could prove decisive. A series of polls this week have shown conservative Finance Minister Giscard d'Estaing and united left leader Mit-

the runoif vote May 19. Both candidates' reluctance to break new ground appeared to have been dictated by a desire to avoid alienating the voters they won in the first-round ballot last Sunday by appealing too blatantly for runoff support from those who backed now-eliminated candidates

Mr. Mitterrand who is backed by the powerful Communist party, at the end of the debate made a direct, emotional, but vague appeal for support from those who had voted for other candidates. His special target is the 15 percent of the electorate that voted for Gaullist candidate Jacques Chaban-Delmas and the 3.2 percent that backed shopkeeper champion Jean Royer. The originally planned 90-minule debate dealt entirely with domestic problems.

Only after journalist-arbiters of the state televizion monopoly insisted did the candidates reluctantly and briefly discuss foreign affairs in a 10-minute "overtime" period.

Island of Calm The added oil costs and their future effect on France and the crisis of Europe were barely touched upon, as if the country were somehow an isolated island of calm. Rather, as in two sharper radio debates conducted during the first-round campaign, Mr. Mitterrand attacked Mr. Giscard d'Estaing for his alleged mishandling of the economy over the last 11 years while the finance minister complained that his adversary refused to discuss the future.

However, unlike their past radio encounters. Mr. Giscard d'Estaing did not bother to contest Mr. Mitterrand's claims that inflation was now running at an annual rate of 17 percent.

Nor did he contest Mr. Mitterrand's assertion that the left's plans to nationalize nine large industrial groups over 29 years would cost $4 billion rather than $11.2 billion as the finance minister had once claimed.

Such points are not without their potential importance since Mr. Giscard d'Estaing has long been unchallenged in his mastery of economic and financial

The Socialist leader also scored by brushing aside Mr. Giscard d'Estaing's warnings about the danger of nationalization quoting the constitution of the Fifth Republic—hand-tailored for the late Gen, oe Gaulle-which justifies such action in the case of monopoly abuses.

However, at that time, the Senate did adopt, 44 to 41, a Muskie plan to have the government monitor wage and price hikes with strong authority to get relevant information from businesses and unions.

Thy Muskie proposal would have given the President perior to enforce price commitments made by industries when they were decontrolled.

But, as the debate resumed yetterday, the Senate changed its mind and tentatively adopted an amendment of Sen, John Tower, R-Texas, as a substitute for the Muskie plan.

The Removal of Mr. Nixon

President Nixon's resignation, we observed in this space (IHT, Nov. 7) that neither the time nor the circumstances was right. We stated then that an overwhelming case could be made for the President's removal from office, but that the case for resignation was not necessarily stronger than the case for allowing the impeachment process to proceed, and that events would doubtless clarify the issue before long. It struck us then, as it does now, that if the President were to resign it would be vital that the public be provided persuasive evidence of the case against his continuing to serve in office.

When the most dangerous variation on the theme of resignation was advanced—namely Sen. James Buckley's proposal that the President step down in an aura of innocence and without any publicly agreed upon findings one way or the other-we took particular issue with it. Today we are witnessing what might seem to be a replica of last November's outcry. However, events have in fact gone a considerable way toward resolving last fall's unsettled questions. There is now in the public domain, by Mr. Nixon's own hand, a documentary record of presidential misconduct and moral failure which transcends political lines and ideological differences among the public. Testimony to this development may also be found in editorials from the Chicago Tribune and the Omana World-Tribune. These editorials, calling for impeachment or Mr. Nixon's resignation, are testimony to the fact that Richard Nixon, by virtue of the records he himself has furnished of his performance in office. has managed to alienate profoundly important parts of his constituency-those elements, in fact, who have first call on his consideration and the most acute grounds for disappointment. To the best of our knowledge and belief, as they say on the witness stand, nobody has ever accused either the Chicago Tribune or the Omaha World-Herald of being liberal, elitist or Eastern seaboard in its outlook-let alone of being all three at once.

The conclusions that have been reached by these two newspapers, and by others who have been among the President's most stalwart supporters, are important for two reasons. One is that they show signs of fulfilling one prerequisite of the President's removal from office under circumstances least likely to divide the country and create huge reservoirs of public acrimony, suspicion and dispute: this prerequisite is that his own

About six months ago, at a time when constituency not feel that the President has there was a sudden burst of demands for been removed by a vengeful, partisan and unjust political opposition. The second reason that these conclusions are important is that they are firmly founded on an acknowledgement of presidential wrongdoing, as distinct from being based only on some amorphous sense that he has been unjustly robbed by others of his capacity to lead.

> Where we would differ with the Chicago Tribune's appraisal is in its apparent conclusion that the transcripts recently released by Mr. Nixon, damning as they are, constitute a sufficiently complete or coherent statement of the case on which the President's removal must rest. Moreover, what is missing from the Tribune's recommended solution, as it is in the case of most of those who have raised their voices for the President's resignation, is any provision for the manner in which he would leave office and its aftermath for him. Former Vice-President Agnew, if we may be a bit crude about the transaction, bought himself (and the office he had in fact disgraced) a little necessary dignity in exchange for an official public presentation of the particular charges he would have had to answer had he not resigned. The President's case is different in some important respects—the experience of removal or resignation of a man from the presidency is by nature bound to be more traumatic, and the relatively simple format > for bargaining does not exist in this case. Still, the basic ingredients are there and there are enough interested and honorable parties who have some claim to a role and some authority in these affairs to negotiate a proper outcome. That outcome, it seems to us-and we are specifically thinking of something short of the result of a fully played out impeachment process—would have roughly to provide the following elements: some form of indemnification of the President as a private citizen, some formal presentation of the reasons for his leaving office, and some acknowledgement, if only tacit, by Mr. Nixon of his acceptance of both parts of the arrangement.

> One thing is certain: The pressures will increase for his removal, the revelations will multiply, and the constituency will grow. Mr. Nixon's presidency is beyond recovery. That is what the transcripts—and the public reading of them-have made plain. The question is no longer whether he should be removed from office, but how and when he will go. And the answer, in large measure, is up pears to owe the fall of his Liberal party government to what he calls the "scourge of inflation." Prices in Canada have gone up 10.4 percent in a year, the same intolerable rate as the climb in the United States.

Nevertheless, it is doubtful that runaway prices alone would have brought about Mr. Trudeau's ouster. Beneath the surface it was the politics of minority government, resting in this case on the shaklest of alliances with the radical New Democratic party, that brought Mr. Trudeau down. Since the 1972 election, he has had to depend on the support of the NDP in the House of Commons in order to prevail over the combined vote of the Progressive Conservatives and the Social Credit party; and it was the NDP's opposition to the prime minister's economic program that finally forced his undoing.

The parties both to the left and to the right of the government wanted price and wage controls; the prime minister, with a possibly jaundiced eye to the American experience, thought they would do little good. The New Democrats advocated pricing Cana-

Prime Minister Pierre Elliott Trudeau ap- dian goods for export higher than those for domestic consumption, a possible invitation to economic warfare which Mr. Trudeau understandably rejected. Where the prime minister's budget made concessions to the left, as it did on housing finance, the NDP found them "unworkable" or inadequate. It was the pressure of the NDP that kept the freeze on oil prices long after the Trudeau government wanted to end it. The party also was a major factor in the stiffening of controls on American financial investments in Canada.

> Although inflation has caused real hardship for many Canadians they are not necessarily disposed to put all the biame on the Liberal government. They may even accept the prime minister's view that the problem is worldwide, requiring worldwide solutions. New elections are expected in July: and in any case, Wednesday's vote in Commons does not mean the exit from Canadian politics of Mr. Trudeau, who by general consent has grown in stature during his six years in office, especially in the last 18 months under the vicissitudes of running a minority gov-

Cold War Casualty

It is ironic that Willy Brandt, the man who sought to promote détente between the Federal German Republic and East Europe, including the "other Germany," has been brought down by a case of espionage which fits perfectly into the patterns of a cold war that is clearly still being waged behind the mask of normalization. Whether the wirepullers in East Berlin can derive much satisfaction from the political consequences of their spectacular coup is an open questionthey may find that it will rebound on themselves. Yet the degree to which Ostpolitik exposes West Germany to harm emerges clearly.

Brandt's resignation cannot conceal the fact that his government was in trouble even before the Guiliaume affair broke. Its political substance was already heavily eroded. Whether a change of chancellors will make the problems easier to solve .. is something the near future will reveal...

Power of Oil

Political power, said Mao, grows out of the barrel of a gun. Last year it seemed more likely to come out of a barrel of crude oil... It should have been the Year of Europe. It was demonstrably not. If 1973 belonged to anyone it belonged to the Arabs-which probably surprised them as much as anyone. Perhaps we had all taken the words of Chairman Mao too literally, and too much to heart. Yet guns still are important. More of them will be bought with the money from oil, and partly because of the tensions caused by the (October) was there is less chance of a new arms agreement between the United States and the Soviet Union.

The Politics of Divorce in Italy

By C. L. Sulzberger

PARIS-One of the greatest strengths of the contemporary Roman Catholic Church has been its flexibility as expressed by growing willingness to recognize the wisdom of separating clerical and state affairs and by acceptance of decidedly liberal opinions among many of its prelates,

Since the papacy of John XXIII began in 1958, these trends have been marked. In southern Africa the church has taken a decisive lead in pressing for an end to racial inequality. Many of its priests have suffered for their support of the blacks.

Throughout Latin America the Catholic Church has associated itself with advanced social and political movements and opposed right-wing dictatorships. Such Catholic leaders as the Most Rev. Helder Camara, archbishop of Recife, Brazil, are accepted symbols of this current.

The Vatican, under both Pope John and Pope Paul VI. his suchas moved perceptibly toward formulation of its own detente with the Marxist world. It improved relations with Yugoslavia and Poland and pressed the hard-shelled Hungarian Cardinal Mindszenty to abandon his refuge in the U.S. Embassy at Budapest. The last two pontiffs have received important Communist envoys.

Sharp Cleavage

Against this background it is difficult to comprehend the sharp cleavage between Catholic and non-Catholic parties in Italy itseif. a cleavage now artificially forced by the Vatican and its supporters. They inspired Sunday's and Monday's referencum on whether the divorce law. enacted by parliament in 1970, should be repealed.

The issue is really whether the church in Italy should have even vestigial temporal power. In most Catholic countries such as France or Belgium—to say nothing of Czechoslovakia and Poland-the question has long since been resolved. Even Cardinal Conway, primate of all Ireland (both North and South), favors secularization and separation of church and state.

The debate has gone on in Italy since the medieval wars of Guell (papal maximalists) and Ghibelline (for division of powers. As the lay domains of the Pope shrank to the purely token size of Vatican City, a tiny enclave inside Rome, the apparent issue dwindled. In 1970 when the divorce law was enacted-and anproved by the constitutional court—this old quarrel seemed at last to have ended.

Unfortunately neither the entrenched Vatican bureaucracy nor its most ardent supporters accepted this decision of the Italian state. Urged on by political leaders more interested in altering the present party balance of power than they were in marital ethics, a movement was launched to demand a referendum on the law's validity. This is provided for under the constitution; and almost three times the necessary number of signatures -

500,000—petitioned for a vote. The result has been to split the existing coalition that unearly runs the country. On one side-theoretically favoring restoring the ban on divorce-are the Christian Democrats. & Catholic party whose political riews actually cover a broad spectrum. On the other side are their coalition partners, the Socialists and Social Democrats, who have joined in a center-left administration but who are traditionally anti-clerical. They oppose church interference in political matters, and therefore favor divorce.

Political Problem

To make matters even more embarrassing, the Christian Demcerats find themselves voting with their enemies, the neo-Pasciri Italian Social Movement, One MSI leader has himself had two wives, one married in church, one by civil ceremony. He thus hopes to have his divorce and defeat it too.

The problem posed is almost wholly political. It has little to do with modern church practice as expressed in most countries with a largely Catholic population. But the Vatican would seem to have been pushed into a corner by its own conservatives urged onward by some Christian Dem-ocratic leaders.

Mr. Nixon's Judgmer

By James Reston

WASHINGTON.—In the Congressional Globe for June 4. 1842, the official stenographer in the House of Representatives reports John Quincy Adams as

"Mr. Adams said ... 'Why, what mockery it would be for the Constitution of the United States to say that that House should have the power of impeachment, extending even to the President of the United States himself, and yet to say that the House had not the power to obtain the evidence and proofs on which their impeachment was based.' It appeared to him [Adams] equivalent to a self-evident principle. that the power of impeachment gives to the House necessarily the power to call for persons and papers." (Congressional Globe, 27th Congress (2d session, page

Nevertheless, 132 years later this is precisely the principle President Nixon is challenging in the Watergate case. He has refused to turn over the additional "evidence and proofs" requested by the House Judiciary Committee and the special prosecutor, Leon Jaworski, and Mr. Nixon's lawyer, James St. Clair, has threatened to fight the case all the way through the Supreme Court if

It was probably inevitable that this conflict between the President's claims to "confidentiality" and the House's power to call for "persons and papers" in an impeachment proceeding, should be submitted to the highest court for judicial review. But again what is odd about the President's defense is that he has chosen

It appears, moreover, that the House Judiciary Committee counsel has more detailed and exact versions of the tapes than exist in either the White House or the office of the special prosecutor. It also seems that the committee counsel has been doing a serious investigation on its own. And besides the obstruction of justice in the Watergate case, there remain possible bribery issues in connection with the ITI case, the milk producers' case and the connection between Bebe Rebozo and Howard Hughes.

But as the House Judiclary Committee begins its impeachment hearings, the basic fact is that the case has to be laid out. The committee and its staff have repeatedly backed away from confrontation with the White House. By so doing they avoided traps in a truly impressive fashion. Now they have to take the initiative. They have to present the evidence in an unmistakable way. Whether they can do it to the satisfaction of a Congress and a public which seem to have no capacity for absorbing large amounts of detailed information is unclear.

Federico Fellini Recaptures Past in New Film 'Amarcord'

By Thomas Quinn Curtiss

CANNES. France, May 10 (IHT). — Federico Fellini's "Amarcord" opened the 27th Cannes Film Festival last night, although it is not entered in the competition.

The film is a backward glauce at life in a seaside town in Italy as remembered by a middle-aged man. It is not an autobiography, Fellini said at a press conference, but it might be defined as an autobiography of an attitude.

Forty years ago, Titta, the protagonist. was an average schoolboy from a lower middle-class family. His mother was a doting, gentle creature, his father, a gruff but kindly construction boss. His crusty old grandfather the household with supplied comic relief. A Ceremony Titia's hometown drow:ed through the silent, cold indoor months. awakening in spring when tiny tufts, known as "manine," came floating down and the effigy of winter was burned at a ceremony in the town square. Summer drew hordes of tourists to the local hotel and neighboring beaches. One night, the excited townspeople went out in boats to see the transatiantic liner, Rex. flash by on its maiden voyage. That summer, too. a crazy uncle was declared cured and brought home. After a glass of brandy, the uncle climbed a tree and refused to come down. pelting his family with applex and shouting that he must have a Woman. Enter the straightjacket brigade.

Titta, like his uncle, was obsessed by the thought of women: the obese proprietress of a tobacco stall, the drab prostitute who haunted the beaches, and Gradisca, the town beauty, a hairdresser who spent her free time at the movies gaping at American movie stars.

Fall brings melancholy. Titta's mother dies unexepectedly and Gradisca, renouncing her daydreams of Gary Cooper, marries a policemen and coes to live elsewhere. Her wedding breaklast is interrupted by a doempourthat is Titta's last recollection of than 15 years old, the report said. his adolescence.

Fellini has not bound the sequences together firmly-one tollows another abruptly without motivation or explanation, as fragments of far-off time might leap to mind in idle remembrance. The lack of strong continuity lends his new film an uncertain pace and occasionally he lingers too long over some passage. But such are minor flaws: Fellini remains a magician of words, pictorial composition and atmosphere. His exuberant and contagious humor brightens depressing classrooms. family squabbles and pompous officialdom.

With a few nimble strokes, Fellini pictures the innards of even the least of his characters. Without distortion or over-emphasis, he draws the background of Mussolini Italy with its strengththrough-joy parades and meetings, its severe suppression of individual liberties and its hysteria over any threat of dissent as when the troops are called out to still a phonograph that is playing "The International").

Actors and non-actors are mingled in the cast. Magali Noel is the pretty, movie-struck hairdresser who in a saturic realization of her fantasies achieves her ambition to become a cinema stat and comports herself like Paulette Goddard. Bruno Zanin is both amusing and touching as the voungster of 40 years ago. Pupella Maggio and Armando Brancia neatly fit their assignments as his parents. But there isn't a character, down to the passing entras, who tails to convince.

"Amarcord" again discloses Fellini as an extraordinary artist. Perhaps no director working now can match him in making the screen come alive. A sustained rhythm is lacking in his latest picture, but this, by its nature, was inevitable. For here he seeks by the resources of his medium to recapture the essence of yesterday.

The film is now on view in Paris at the Gaumont Elysées ein Italian with French subtitless and at the Imperial the Gaument Bur Gauche and the Hautefeuille dubbed into French.

BANGKOK, May 10 (AP!-Nearly half the 50-plane U.S. B-52 bomber force in Thailand will be withdrawn this year. Thailand's deputy chief of staff said today.

'Discovering Leaves' in Senegalese Art

By Michael Gibson

DARIS, May 10 (IRT).-An exhibition of contemporary art from Senegal opened recently at the Grand Palsis (to June 24) and includes 143 works by 33 artists, 26 of whom were born after 1940.

It seems both useful and fair to point out that the show does not represent the state of Senegalese or African culture but that it offers, with possible exceptions, a panorama of African ertists working in a Western idiom. There is nothing new about individual artists working in the framework of a culture that is not natively their own, and nothing reprehensible about it either. But they remain individuals and cannot be taken to express anything specific to the culture of their country of origin.

Like so many African countries, Senegal is a rather patchy entity, hacked and sutured together by the colonial powers. Its present

Painting a picture or shaping a sculpture seems a very obvious act to any of us, and we usually concentrate on what the indivi-dual work is "about" rather than on the significance our culture attributes to the act of applying color to a rectangular surface or forming a three-dimensional figure. Yet the meaning of the act depends entirely on the terms to which any given culture has come with its own imagination and on the form taken by its inherent mysticism, the unutterable foundations of its identity in the cosmos. It is, for instance, the trivial

Because an idiom implies an outlook and if the outlook is not specifically his own the artist must either inflect the idiom to his own purpose, or enter wholeheartedly into the outlook it imposes upon him. If he does neither he will just be producing the same sort of junky formal spin-off that thousands of European "artistes - peintres" are already producing for the indiscriminate consumption of millions of tourists.

material, such as masks and statues, works them into a two-dimensional pattern or structure and shapes them into a personal idiom. Seck is a gifted artist and perhaps the most "African" in the show, not because he uses traditional forms, but because he succeeds in using the abstract rocabulary of forms to communicate, in a language that is intel-lighle to us, the specific "otherness" of the African world, "I am no longer what I used to be." his mask figures seem to say, but I am not like you. Paults there are—the play is as generous with words as too long—it runs for 3 1 2 hours with startling effects. Here, with a short intermission—and some of the ventures into Hollywood musical don't work, especially the use of a Gershwin pseudospiritual to suggest spiritual release. But, aided by director Terry Hands and designer Farrah. Mr. Barnes has attempted a work of unmense scale and, for most of the time, succeeds. It is funny and sharp and stimulating, a gigantic, glorious gallimaulry of

> No one could accuse Jason Miller of taking risks. His "That Championship Season" with an all-American cast has opened at shock to find a young writer who has taken no notice of any theatrical developments of the last 30 years, who can turn out a slick efficient three-act melodrama of such an old-fashioned kind.

It is difficult to square the -play's American reputation—a run of more than 800 performances in New York, a Tony award as best play, the New York Critics' Award and a Pulitzer prize-with this raucously conventional work exposing the effect of a dubious ethic-"win at all costs"-on the lives of a championship basketball team 25 years on, facing middleaged failure.

On this side of the Atlantic. the play seems hysterical as the characters' petty corruptions are revealed, each spaced out over the evening to provide strong endings to each act. All the characters lack self-control-at the slightest frustration, they scream, yell, fight or threaten to kill each other.

Of its melodramatic kind, "That Championship Season' is an accomplished piece of work, often funny; but it is also shallow, shrill and predictable. A.J. Antoon's direction is effective andaggressive. Members of the cast headed by Broderick Crawford as the coach, a sentimental bigot, act their parts well but cannot be anything other than stereotypes.

The British obsession with middle-class family life continues to dominate theater. At the National, John Hopkins's "Next of Kin" gets the whole clan together -mother, her children, their wives and husbands and their in the same tone of voice-derived from old Hollywood movies-while Mr. Hopkins's change and shift, according to whom they re speak-

"Next of Kin" is somewhat obsessional-11, 100, is overlong and worries away at its theme with dogged intensity. But mostly it is a fascinating and moving account of people trapped by domestic circumstances with a fine performance from Gemma Jones as the deserted wite, struggling to maintain self-control. Harold Pinter directs perceptively.

Alan Ayckbourn's "Table Manners" at the Greenwich Theatre uses similar material-an attempted affair between a giri and her brother-in-law-to great comic effect. It is a slight play, not as interesting as his "Absurd Person Singular," but continually amusing, particularly during a family meal when everyone pledges to be nice to each other and at once Start quarrelling over the seating arrangements.

Mr. Ayckbourn likes to set himself difficult technical problems and this play is the first of a trilogy covering the same events but from a different room. Thus. the second play is set in the living room and the third in the garden so that what happens off-stage in one play is on-stage in the next.

On the evidence of the first of the sequence, this results in a thinning of narrative. There are gaps in the play-one character getting drunk off-stage and obviously misbehaving—that in other circumstances would have been filled in. But an excellent cast-Tom Courtenay is the central character-and sensitive direction by Eric Thompson make the evening a pleasant one.

Music in Italy: Florence Festival Opens

By William Weaver

FLORENCE, May 10 (IHT).—Though Florence's Teatro Communale has been without an artistic director and without a general manager for some time the theater's organization has miraculously put together a fairly impressive program for the 37th edition of the Maggio Musicale, the tradi-tional, prestigious Florentine festival. It opened last night with a revival of Gaspare Spontini's 'Agnese di Hohenstaufen," a suitable choice for this Spontini centenary year, which has already witnessed other important Spontini performances. including his "Fernando Cortez" (IRT. Feb. 5).

Like "Cortez." written for the French court, this "Agnese" is a ceremonial opera, first composed as part of a wedding celebration in Berlin, in 1829, where Spontini was official composer to the Prussian court. It is a long, solemn, rich work, and to succeed nowadays is requires not only a first-rate cast, but also a penetration of the composer's particular, quirkish style, neither Italian, nor French, nor German, but a confluence of all three, where Beethoven and Rossini seem to meet, in perfect harmony.

It cannot be said this Florence revival met these requirements. The singing was never better than adequate, and not often that. In the title role, Leyla Gencer was barely audible; even her vaunted temperament seemed in abeyance, and she did little more than mark the role. The other female part, that of Agnese's mother, lay a bit high for mezzo-soprano Joy Davidson, though she had some good moments. The tenor Veriano Luchetti was also miseast and tended to force his naturally sweet voice.

As the emperor, Mario Petri looked regal, but his concept of the part belonged to a later part of the 19th century; at times, he seemed to be singing Boris Godunov. The smaller roles were generally well assigned. The chorus, a vital element in this piece, was frequently hesitant, ten-

All in all, the reading was not coherent. Riccardo Muti, who conducted a radio performance of "Agnese" four years ago, clearly knows and admires the score and there were patches of brilliance in his reading. But he was unable to pull it all together to impose a vision. One missed that clear sense of musical architecture that so distinguished his "William Tell" here in Florence a few years ago.

Some elements of Corrado Cagli's sets (notably a lovely, leafy scrim; and some of his costumes were individually handsome, but again one missed unifying vision. Under the circumstances, the director, Franco Enriquez, did what he could: he moved the chorus with skill and he generally kept the principals static.

The Maggio's opening, then, was a respectable, rather than exciting event.

live cattle dropped about 80 in through the customs point of der, over the past few days. The daily average in the previous weeks was 1,500 head a day, reliable sources reported.

The imports also slumped at the customs point of Forteza, close to the Austrian border, and at the Italian-Yugoslav customs point of Gorizia. "What has halted imports of meat and live cattle," a spokes-man for an Italian association of meat importers said today, "I the lack of cash for many im-porters as they must meet the government rules as an amount equal to 50 percent of imports value must be deposited for six months without any interest. "Importers are now trying to borrow money even on foreign financial markets. Until they get it mest imports will stagnate," the spokesman added.

Retail prices of mest have risen 50 lire a kilogram and the price of live cattle 150 lire a kilogram. Some experts contend that the increases are unjustified as there are tons of mest stored in Italy. We know for sure there is a lot of meat stored in Italy. Curbs on imports could not have immediate effects on prices," he

INA Won't Bid for Avis

INA Corp. has decided not to acquire the 52 percent of the outstanding shares of Avis Inc. held by International Telephone & Telegraph Corp. INA chairman John Gurash said in a statement: "Our studies of the possible acqui-sition of Avis stock were preliminary in nature. These studies are now completed and we have concluded that the acquisition of Avis Inc. does not fit with the basic plans for our insurance business. We have no further interest in such an acquisition. Any additional acquisitions by INA Corp. will be compatible with our present in-

Citroen expects to report a profit in 1973 but is admittedly in the midst of a "difficult" 1974, a company source reports. The energy crisis and higher gasoline prices have damaged sales of the larger, high-powered cars for which the company is known, and this is the year that was previously planned for heavy capital outlays and expenses for moving into new plants, the aide says. "We aren't sitting on a mattress of gold, but we aren't in a desperate position at all," the spokesman adds, specifically denying French press reports that the company is interested in selling out to the state-owned Renault or to any

Motorola Rejects Zenith Offer

Motorola Inc., confirming Zenith Radio Corp.'s offer to purchase two of its television manufacturing facilities, says the offer "doesn't meet the criteria applicable to Motorola's good-faith efforts to sell its television business to a company whose purchase wouldn't raise anti-trust questions and who would maintain Motorch s television receiver business as a viable competitive entity." Motorola says it has advised Zenith that discussions for the purchase of the facilities "therefore wouldn't be productive." Motorola sals Zenith is "the dominant manufacturer of home

The dispute is over tariff cuts that the EEC is to make as compensation for trade the United States lost through the enlarge-ment of the community in 1973. Earlier this week, sources both in Washington and in Brussels broadly hinted that the dispute would be settled "within a few days."

Some informants indicated that an EEC decision on the list of items on which the community is ready to reduce tariffs and which would be acceptable to Washington could be expected from yesterday's meeting of the permanent representatives of the nine community nations at the EEC

U.S. Business Economists Say Growth This Year Will Be Nil

(AP-DJ).—The economic consultants to the Business Council predicted today that for 1974 as a whole the economy will show no real growth over 1973.

The economists, who are employed by the major corporations which make up the council, said in their economic outlook that the real gross national product for the year will be at or slightly below the 1973 level. Real GNP measures the economy's total out-put of goods and services after removing the effects of inflation.

Real GNP actually declined at a 5.8 percent annual rate in the first quarter this year. The Business Council economists said they expect some improvement in economic growth during the second half of 1974, but that would not be enough to offset a likely decline for the first half.

The forecasters estimated that the nation's unemployment rate in the fourth quarter of this year will be close to 6 percent compared with the present 5 percent. For the year as a whole, unemployment is likely to average 5.6 percent, they said, compared with 4.7 percent average for 1973.

WASHINGTON, May 10 (Reuters).-The government's action will lead to higher interest rates for all home buyers. Sen. William Promire, D-Wise, said,

"The net effect of the administration's program would be to mcrease interest rates for all home buyers," he said in a statement, "An increase in federal borrowing of $10 billion would simply drive up interest rates even more and divert more funds from thrift institutions. which are alread; losing deposits because of the increase in mar-

This would balance the pudget and eliminate the need for any borrowing by the Treasury during the next fiscal year, which would help bring down interest rates and make more money

TALLETRAND:

The Art of Survival

By Jean Oricas, Histrated, Translated from the French by Patricia Wolf. Knopt. 677 pp. $12.95.

THE story goes that Charles Maurice de Talleyrano-Perigord was once asked by his barber, "You have had all pos-sible titles; bishop, minister, prince. But both has attacked Talleyrand almost from the outset of his extraordinary career, for he was one of those guileful manipulators who served many masters but made few friends, and who could nonetheless jest about his infamies. Only Talleyrand could have remarked, after he had scuttled Napoleon for Louis XVIII, that "treason is merely a matter of dates."

An inveterate schemer, britliantly resilient, immoral and amoral. Talleyrand was not a person to argue that ethics and statesmanship had anything in common. As he told Adolphe Thiers two years before he died. "Remember, dear fellow, that for 40 years I was the most morally discredited man in Europe, yet I was all-powerful in the French government or on the threshold of it." Flyers' Rally Ties NHL Cup Playoffs

By Parton Keese

BOSTON, May 19 (NYT).~ Andre (Moose) DuPont and Bobby Clarke sent the Philadelphia Flyers' stock scaring last night by beating the Boston Bruns, 3-2, in overtime and tying their Stanley Cup final series at one game apiece.

Rallying from a two-goal defien, Clarke, the Flyers' captain, scored in the opening minute of the second period to make it 2-1. Then DuPont, the Flyer defenseman, stunned the Boston crowd with the tring goal with 50 seconds to play in regulation time and the Flyer goalie, Bernie Parent, removed for a sixth

After 12 minutes of suddendeath. Clarke took his own rebound and lofted it over the prostrate form of Gilles Gilbert. the Bruin goalie, for the goal that won the game and gave an expansion club its first playoff victory over a Boston team.

The triumph also marked the first time in 30 games that the Plyers had wen in Boston, and it represented the first time a post-1967 National Hockey League club had won a game in a Stanley Cup final. "I have to admit," said Fred Shero, the Plyers' coach, immediately after the thrilling comeback victory. "I had my doubts about how far we could go. But once the overtime began, I changed my mind. I really feel now that we will win the Stanley

As in the first game, won by Boston, 3-2, the home team took to a 2-0 lead with two goals by the league's leading line of Phil Esposito. Wayne Cashman and Kcn Hodge.

Cashman, benefiting from a two-man advantage, put the puck in the net from the corner of the crease after Parent had withstood enormous pressure from the doubie power play. A little over three minutes later. Espesito's stick proved to be one too many in another pressure situation, and he scored.

Numerous Fights Unlike the first game, however, the Flyers and the Bruins were far more belligerent toward each other and the numerous fights led indirectly to the final result, Dave Schultz was the real Dave Schultz, the normally terribletempered left wing of Philadel-phis. His counterpart was the Boston rowdy, Terry O'Reilly, a right wing.

As advertised, expected and finally fulfilled, the two battlers met, gloveless, in center ice during the first period. Schultz, the hammer, won the boxing, but O'Relly, the mauler, took the erestling.

Referee Art Skov gave an entra the minutes in penalties to Schultz (seven minutes), which led to Boston's five-on-three advantage and the Bruins' first

But later in the second period. Cashman evened the disadvanlages by jumping into a fight between Gilbert and Orest Kindrachuk of the Flyers, and he was banished for the rest of the game under the "third men" rule."

The goalies took control of the contest from that point until the "one-minute-to-play" warning was sounded. Shero had called Parent to the bench while Clarke was doing his thing in the Ervins' corner. Suddenly, the puck shot out to DuPont, who instantly wound up and fired from between the face-off circles.

Koosman, who scattered nine hits while walking two and striking out eight, was supported by a nine-hit attack, including three apiece by Dave Schneck and Jerry Grote.

Grote drove in two runs with second-inning, bases-loaded single off Cubs, starter Burt Hooton. With a man on in the seventh inning Schneck drove his fifth home run of the year out of Wrigley Field, at least 380 feet. The Mets loaded the bases with one out in the second inning on a walk to Rusty Staub, a single by Schneck and a walk to Wayne Garrett. Grole's single scored Staub and Schneck and Bud Harrelson's single sent Garrett home with the third run. With Jim Kremmel pitching in the fourth inning, the Meta scored two more runs on just one hit. Kremmel walked Garrett and gave up a hit to Grote. Koosman laid down a bunt along the first base line and Kremmel threw past first, allowing Garrett to score. Grote scored when Jose Cardenal's throw back to the infield went

Typing the Transcripts

WASHINGTON - We know a lot about the presidential ed them." I said. transcripts now, but we still do not know much as to how ther were transcribed. A friend of mine who was at the White House told me the story involved with getting out the 1,254 pages and 200,000 words in time for the President's speech on the night of April 29, a Monday. This, according to him, is what happened. We got the word on Friday that the President had decided to turn over tranecripus of tapes to the House Judiciary Committee and the call went out for 30 secretaries who could type and listen to tapes at the same time." "Why didn't they ask Rose

Buchwald

Mary Woods to transcribe them?"

"She's not very good at using a tape machine. And we didn't want to go through that whole dreary explanation again about why long portions of the tape were erased.

"Did you hurt her feelines when you told her she couldn't do it?"

"She was rather milled as list. but to make it up to her we let her type the speech the President gave on TV explaining why the transcripts would show he was

"So then what happened?" "We set up a room in the bottom of the White House with tape machines, typewriters, coffee and

"We explained to the girls that they were part of history and what they typed on the weekend could make or break the President of the United States."

Storey Wins N.Y. Award NEW YORK, May 10 (AP).-"The Contractor" by David Storey was picked yesterday by the Nev Work Drama Critics Circle as the best play of the 1973-74 season. The award was the second in a row for the English author, cited by the group last year for "The Changing Room.

he locked in for the weekend and work eight-hour shifts. We had set up cots in John Dean's old office where they could catch up on sleep when they weren't work-

Dean would have liked that," I said.

"The first shift started typing at midnight on Friday. In the beginning the girls thought it would be a lark, but, as they started listening to the tapes, some of them went white. One girl said to me: This must be the wrong tape. Someone's cursing on it. I told her it was the right tape and that the voice they heard was the President cursing. She didn't believe me and thought I was loking so I made a speech to all the girls,

"I told them they would hear a lot of foul language on the words the President used for national security reasons. I instructed them to type in an 'expletive deleted or an "inaudible when they heard a bad word. Otherwise the Russians would be able to break our code."

"They accepted that?" I asked. "They did at first, but pretty soon it started to get to them. Several of them broke down and started to cry, so we had to send in new girls every half-hour. The language was too much for them. "One girl said: 'It isn't the "expletives" or the "inaudibles" that bother me. I've heard them before. But it's the "unintelligibles" that I just can't take."

"By Saturday afternoon, the girls were refusing to type the transcripts and I was starting to worry. Then I got a brilliant idea if I must say so myself."

"What did you do?" "I called up Billy Graham and asked him if he would come right over. He did and I explained the problem to him. He understood it right away and said he would "Hox?"

"He gave absolution to all the girls transcribing the tapes. He also told them. If God oldn't want a President to curse he would have never created Sony recording machines.

Mary Blume

'Once I became aware of the seemingly boundless incompetence of others, I traded on it by anticipating and reversing the ordinary procedure—by complaining first, then sending order and payment.'

The Fine Art of Complaining

STUNNED and weary as New Yorkers are, they are still supreme at making the best of a bad thing. Accommodation has gone so far that one of the season's big exhibitions, Manhattan's salon de printemps, as it were, was a show on city crime, with showcases full of burglar alarms, sonic devices and bullet-proof glass, and chicly audio-visual demonstrations of congames, auto thefts and general advice on how not to be victimized, burglarized, mugged, raped or robbed. The show was sponsored not by the Metropolitan Museum's Thomas Hoving, who probably wishes he'd thought of it, but by the Police Department, and it got a rave from The

New York Times. Do New Yorkers despair of cleaning up Times Square? Not a bit of it. A plan has been offered to fill it with gambling spots, perhaps on the theory that bad money drives out worse money. "We don't want anything cheap," one of the promoters is quoted as saying. "We want the best kind of Las Vegas-type casinos."

Recently published books also reflect a determination to make the best of a rotten atuation. One can for example buy "A Consumer Guide to Food Additives," which might have been subtitled "Name Your Poison." and there is also "You Can Profit From a Monetary Crisis' by Harry Brown, author in 1970 of "How You Can Profit From the Coming Devaluation."

A Survivor

New Yorkers who need a day or two to recover can attend "a weekend in Gestalt organismic activist therapy for improved here and now functioning." But those who believe that nothing will function here or now, or for that matter sooner or later, might well want to stay home and read the tale of a triumphant survivor, How I Turn Ordinary Complaints Into Thousands of Dollars: The Diary of a Tough Customer" by Ralph Charell. Like everyone. Charell has been faced with shoddy goods, indifferent service and the tedium of daily ripoffs. But he is the sort of man who, when the family washing machine springs a leak and needs a 10-cent piece of new tubing, complains so effectively that he not only gets the tubing but a brand new washing machine Charell has also won apologies and or reimbursements from Con Ed. Ma Bell, Hertz car rentals (twice), Saks Fifth Avenue (twice) and he got $335 from his brokerage house, Dean Witter, after they failed to order 10 lots of March potatoes on the date Charell had specified (for unbelievers, photocopies of checks and letters are included in the book).

Charell insists that he does not attempt to profit from his skill as a complainer but is merely defending himself against a world of "short weights, squelched selfesteem and numberless social muggings." As a successful complainer (recognized says his book's cover, as the world's most successful complainer in the "Guinness Book of World Records"). Charell has plenty of self-esteem and a very refined technique: he now complains first and orders later. As he writes:

Anticipation

"Once I became aware of the seemingly boundless incompetence of others, I traded on it by anticipating and reversing the ordinary procedure—by complaining first, then sending order and payment."

The jacket photograph reveals Charell to be a roungish man with a fixed stare and a slightly smug smile. The copy below says he graduated from Columbia Law School and is in broadcasting. One of his standard ploys is to open his telephoned complaint with the words, "I usually bill between $100 and $150 per hour and there is no way I can break even on this trans-In time, says Charell, he came to believe that his time was really worth that much.

Occasionally, Charell goes too far. When he rightly berated a taxi driver for overcharging for the run from Kennedy Airport to Charell's Manhattan flat, the driver executed a neat and illegal U-turn in front of Charell's door, drove toward Kennedy like fury and dumped Charell and his lurgage somewhere in the swampy reaches around the airport.

But usually he hits it just right. For example, he orders a $280 koala bear from Steuben Glass, to be delivered by a certain date on the West Coast. The bear arrives late. Charell launches into a complaint. Result: He is reimbursed $250 and is also allowed to keep the belated bear.

Eviction Notice

Charell's chutzpah reached its acme when he received an eviction notice: his building in Manhattan's East 80s and five surrounding buildings were to be demolished and replaced by a huge cooperative complex.

The maneuvers over relocation and settlements are too long to be recounted here, but one can only admire Chareli's nerve when late in the negotiations, when after nearly all the other tenants had left and the vrecker's ball was already knocking at neighboring buildings, he had a piano delivered for his young daughter:

"The effect of moving a piano into a 10-story building in which only three tenants lived can only be conjectured, but we thought it would be helpful," he writes. The case ended with Charell getting a $25,000 settlement from his old landlord. who also picked up Charell's hotel bill for the week prior to relocation and even made improvements to the family's new apartment. The new apartment, by the way, was even without the improvements, better than the last one and when Charell's daughter's plano got damaged in transit, he of course attacked he movers to get money for that as well. Charell has certain tips for would be complainers: use top quality writing paper (he likes Tiffany's ecru with kid finish) and do not use a lawyer unless absolutely necessary. Further tips can be learned by ordering Charell's book for $6.95 from his publisher, Stein and Day in New York. But remember first to complain about not getting the book, then send your check.

As Stein and Day's own Ralph Charell says, complain now, pay and order later.

We will explain this new approach to investing:

2 Investor have been really sur-prised at the beginning of this year in just two of the major commodities, such as cocon and silver which have given an ap-proximate yield of nearly 300%. Do you think it is still possible for the market to give you 20% twice or many times more in the coming months? 3. Why this approach chminat the need for market "timing." i How can you determine the full amount of risk . . . shead of time without limiting your profit potential.
